Reviews

This pdf is indeed gripping and exciting. It is written in easy words and phrases and not confusing. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: .about 3,000 pumping plants have been installed in the eight southern counties since 1910. Localities where development of this kind is most conspicuous are San Jacinto Valley, West Riverside, Chino, Ventura County and several valleys in San Diego County. Lands in the mountain or elevated orchard districts, such as Victor, Antelope, Yucaipa, and other valleys situated at elevations of 2,500 to 4,000 feet above sea level, are being rapidly settled or taken up under the Desert Act. Settlers in Victor Valley are making concerted effort to secure government aid for the reclamation of their lands and to consummate a plan for turning the water stored by Arrowhead Reservoir to their lands on the Mojave Desert. The largest addition to the irrigated area of southern California during the past two years is in Palo Verde and Imperial valleys, where water for irrigation is taken by canals from Colorado River. Palo Verde Valley now has its canal system constructed to cover 45,000 acres and the Palo Verde Mutual Water Company reports that about one half of this area is now being irrigated. Extensions to the canal system of Imperial Water Company No. 5 and the construction of a system by Imperial Water Company No. 3 are adding 100,000 acres to the area already reclaimed in Imperial Valley. This land should receive water within a few years. Improvement in the character of construction of irrigation works is conspicuous. Some of the canals now being constructed in Imperial...
