Just an hour, and then away the two must trot, and the chop, chip, chop begins harder than ever; but the poor stone-cutter is happy enough, for he knows he is rich in love; that at eve his wife will be watching at the cottage door; the baby, in her night-gown, ready to call, Night! ood night, and Nanny running across the road to signal that father is coming. After all, loving affectionate children can make even such a poor home as Peter s happy. Cut it into quarters, Then let us see How many pieces For baby boy and me. Where is my baby boy? Tumbled down the stairs; Bumped his head against each one--111 his lordship fares. Jump up my brave young man, Never mind the pain; Bring the bumps to dear mamma, To kiss them well again. My song shall be of a pudding nice, Filled with currants, and plums, and spice; The fairies made it for you and me, As they hid in a holly-bush under a tree; They stirred it up in a great big pot, And here it comes smoking, hot, hot, hot. Pat baby boy, pat, while I cut you a slice Off, this pudding all smelling of sugar and spice. A READY-MADE HOME. Some people destroy all the little birds they can, while others protect them, and even put boxes that they may build their...
