Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Connecticut Health Bulletin, Vol. 41: January, 1927; Issued Monthly by the State Department of Health; Cross Connections in Connecticut In general, the kinds of cross connections which exist come under five different classifications: (a) fire service (b) industrial use (c) boiler feed (d) pump priming (e) auxiliary drinking water. One reason for cross connections is to have two supplies available, as on a fire service line, so that in case of the failure of the public supply or a fire pump drawing possibly from a polluted source, the other source would be ready for use. Another reason might be to save the expense of city water where large volumes of water are needed for industrial purposes, and it is desired to have city water available for emergency. Where water is used for cooling purposes, the city supply from a surface source may be at too high a temperature in the summer, necessitating the use of water from a private well. These two supplies are, therefore, piped together at the cooling plant. Many persons have a private well or spring which they pipe to the house and prefer to use for drinking purposes instead of the city supply. They wish, however, to have the city water ready for use if needed, so that both the city supply and the private supply are piped together in the cellar of the house. Such private supplies must be inspected and analyzed before the interconnection can be approved. New Regulations In consideration of the danger to the health of Connecticut s citizens, the Public Health Council of the State Department of Health has adopted cross connection regulations as a part...
