Excerpt: . should be at one end, preferably the east, and this should open into the shed, as well as out dog;- t-, Bins INTERIOR BARN, SI-IOWING ONEOF THE PENS for grain should be in one end, and the other should be used for mixing grain, for shearing, and a place in which to keep tools, drugs, wool table, and other necessary articles. It is important to have both hay and grain, and also roots, in the same barn as the sheep, as the conveniences save much time, labor and feed. Have the barn stand the long way east and west, with the shearing room on the east end. Plenty of windows, especially on the south side, is important; an abundance of light keeps out dampness and disease, and the air is more easily kept pure. Sheep need light and sunshine. A basement bar n does...
